

Biography

An accomplished and renowned trial attorney, Brian Klein is known for fierce and successful advocacy for his clients in a wide variety of state and federal forums across the country. He is a former federal prosecutor who handles high-stakes civil litigation and criminal and regulatory defense matters, including those before the DOJ, SEC, CFTC, FTC, CFPB, and state authorities.

Brian's clients are successful entrepreneurs and professionals, fast growing and innovative companies, as well as entertainment industry icons. Based on his accomplishments, Brian has been repeatedly recognized as a "Super Lawyer" and Chambers has noted that he is "known as the guy you call when you get in trouble."

A recognized player in the technology industry, Brian chairs the annual American Bar Association's blockchain and digital currency national institute. He also speaks internationally about cutting-edge litigation issues and for years has taught a criminal practice seminar at the USC Gould School of Law.

Brian is admitted to practice in the states of California, Washington, and New York and before numerous federal courts around the country, including the Central and Northern Districts of California and the Southern and Eastern Districts of New York, as well as the U.S. Supreme Court. He graduated from New York University School of Law and received his undergraduate degree from the University of Washington.
